

Gyldendal Norsk Forlag 2021
208 pages
Original title: Ekko
Et essay om algoritmer og begjær
ISBN: 9788205536753

 NORLA's Selected Titles

FOREIGN RIGHTS

foreignrights@gyldendal.no
<http://agency.gyldendal.no>

Gyldendal Agency
P.O. Box 6860 St. Olavs plass
NO-0130 Oslo

RIGHTS SOLD TO

Click here for foreign sales

AWARDS

Click here for awards

Lena Lindgren

Echo An essay on algorithms and desire

An investigative essay into some of the greatest challenges of our time: Echo was the nymph who talked too much. For this, she was sentenced to a fate in which she could only repeat what others said.

In the 2000s, we meet Echo in the principles of media technology: in viral memes, social-media shitstorms and echo chambers. Whoever has the algorithms on their side wins the attention economy's highest prize: being visible. And Echo's great love was Narcissus, he who drowned in his own reflection.

In this essay, Lena Lindgren combines economics, mythology, psychology and science with scenes from Silicon Valley. It is a judgement of our age, a stream of consciousness, and an attempt to portray humanity's blind date with artificial intelligence.

"Highly recommended!"

- Dagbladet, 6 out of 6 stars

Lena Lindgren

Lena Lindgren (born 1969) lives in Oslo. She is a political editor at Morgenbladet. Echo. An essay on algorithms and desire is her first book.

Gyldendal Agency

eng.gyldendal.no